STS meets at William S. Hart Park in Santa Clarita- by Dave Teuschler

Our meeting at William S. Hart Park on the 24th of May, 2007 was well worth the drive to Santa Clarita.

Dr. Jerrold K. Turney gave us a very interesting update on the current situation and future prospects in regards to Sudden Oak Death. This is a problem that will most likely not affect the oaks here in Southern California because of our dry climate, but it is a real problem for nursery growers. Many thousands of Camellias have had to be destroyed because of this disease. All were grown in shade houses where moisture stayed on foliage for long periods of time, therefore giving the disease a chance to get a foothold. We hope that we will have many more opportunities to hear Dr. Turney speak in the future. We thank him for his excellent presentation.

William S. Hart Mansion

Our meeting was held at William S. Hart Park. William S. Hart was born in Newburgh, New York on December 6, 1864. Hart started his acting career in his twenties. At the age of 49, Hart came west to Hollywood to start his movie career. During the next 11 years, he made more than 65 silent films, the last being "Tumbleweeds" in 1925. In 1921, Hart purchased a ranch house and surrounding property. He built a 22 room mansion which today houses Hart's collection of western art, Native American artifacts, and early Hollywood memorabilia. Hart lived at the ranch nearly 20 years until his death in 1946. In his will, Hart gave the Horseshoe Ranch to the County of Los Angeles. It was to be set aside for the use and enjoyment of the public, at no charge. Today, the Horseshoe Ranch consists of 265 acres. Both the ranch house and the Hart residence are open to the public. An assortment of animals reside at Hart Park, including a small herd of bison which were a gift from the Walt Disney Studios in 1962.

2006 Scholarship Recipient Essay - Part 2 of 4

Tree Memories... pass them on

By Roberta Colleasure

My first childhood memory was sitting on the front porch with my grandfather. He was peeling apples for my grandmother's famous apple pie and I was watching the butterflies in our tree. We had the biggest tree on our street. That was really saying something, because the trees on both sides of the street touched in the middle. My grandfather and I would take many long walks down that street. I was the princess and that street was my castle.

A memory is a mental picture of a past experience. My best memories of past experiences always revolve around trees. It could be my son's tire swing, my daughter picking apricots with her grandmother, or the tree house we just completed for my grandsons. It is important that we give the next generation these memories. This can be done by planting trees that line a street or the design of the perfect yard with a tree for the focal point.

Care for the trees is another idea we need to pass on to our children. The best way to teach this is by the examples we set for our children. The recycling of paper products is one example. The United States' forest and paper companies have met a goal to recover 50% of all the paper used. They have projected that by 2012 they will have 55% recovery. The other use for recycled paper products is to burn the paper in a waste-to-energy plant. The heat produced at these plants make electricity from generated steam. 2,000 pounds of waste equals 500 pounds of coal. Presently, waste-to-energy plants generate enough power to supply over 3 million households. The greatest result from waste-to-energy use is the lower amount of buried waste in our landfills. This will reduce the number of landfills in the future.

These trees along with good conservation will be passed on to the next generation and they in turn will teach their own children about trees and pass on these memories. Yes, childhood memories are a precious thing. I believe that beautiful trees should have a place in every child's life, and every adult's memory. Good tree memories will insure that trees and our environment will live forever.
